

Uniden announces smart security products compatible with the Google Assistant

Users seeking to view Uniden security camera footage using voice-control can now benefit from a recent update from Uniden which integrates with the Google Assistant.

Uniden works with the Google Assistant in products such as Google Home, Chromecast, Android phones, iPhones and many other devices using a local Wi-Fi network. Users can ask their Google Assistant to stream video from a security camera directly to a smart display or TV, using Chromecast built-in or a Chromecast dongle.

“The increasing demand for voice control enabled products is on the rise. Uniden wants to offer consumers the ability to manage their home security cameras using voice control while integrating with other products around the home,” commented Brad Hales, national marketing and communications manager, Uniden.

“Integrating the Uniden security range with the Google Assistant will keep our products competitive within the surveillance category and provides consumers with more flexibility when viewing footage around the home.”

The Google Assistant can be used to view footage on a range of Uniden security cameras¹, allowing users to keep watch on the home with ease – just say “Hey Google, stream the garage on the TV.” Uniden security cameras can also be integrated with a range of other smart home products which are compatible with the Google Assistant including smart lights, air conditioning and AV setups, creating a complete smart home hub.

¹ Google Assistant available on Uniden App Cam 55, 56, XLIGHT and GXVR series

Footage can be viewed and accessed from anywhere in the world via the dedicated Uniden app. Footage can be stored directly on SD card or hard drive, as well as the Uniden Cloud.

The Google Assistant is currently available on Uniden App Cam 55, App Cam 56, XLIGHT and GXVR models and will be available in other Uniden security products over the next couple of months.
