Stay connected with the smartest home phone from Uniden

Designed to be the smartest home phone on the market, the new Uniden extended long range XDECT 83xx series offers a selection of advanced and practical features making it easier to stay connected with loved ones.

Unique to Uniden's range of advanced cordless home phones is Call Block PRO. Designed to help minimise unwanted calls - particularly from telemarketers - this new feature blocks registered phone numbers that share the same first digits of a phone number with a different extension.

For people who want to reduce their use of mobile phones, the new XDECT 83xx series provides a viable alternative for staying connected while at home. For others, it could mean they are able to take advantage of competitive mobile-to-mobile call rates, while still enjoying the comfort of talking on the ergonomically designed home phone.

Bluetooth connectivity and a USB charging port enables dialling and receiving of mobile calls via the cordless handset on the XDECT 83xx series, while simultaneously recharging the mobile phone. Users can link up to four mobiles to the XDECT 83xx series phone, making this a welcome addition to households with multiple smartphones.

Clever inclusions like Blackout Power Failure ensure can continued dialling and receiving of calls - even during a power outage - while high definition sound improves audible quality for exceptionally clear conversations.

The new cordless phone series offers extended long range technology thanks to its high gain antenna. Additional repeaters can extend the range even further, making the XDECT 83xx series ideal for larger properties as well as warehouses and farms.
