

Uniden shines a spotlight on its new surveillance systems

A leader in communication solutions, Uniden has refreshed its popular Guardian digital wireless surveillance system range with the introduction of the G37xx series.

The new DIY security systems offer homeowners greater flexibility and a host of practical, advanced features. The new models - the G3720 and G3710 - each include a seven-inch touchscreen tablet and weatherproof cameras (two and one, respectively).

The range can be expanded to include up to four weatherproof cameras, making it suitable for growing families. In addition, the ability to install cameras where cables cannot reach means users can change the camera configuration quickly and easily as required and is a practical inclusion for roving households.

Suitable for monitoring the interiors and exteriors of residential properties, the G37xx series cameras communicate wirelessly via the touchscreen tablet. This can also connect to the internet for remote access from a smartphone. The touchscreen tablet has Full High Definition (HD) 1080p resolution for spectacularly clear picture quality, allowing homeowners to clearly see details such as registration plates and facial features which are critical in the event of an incident.

Unique to the market is the introduction of an optional motion detection spotlight with a weatherproof outdoor camera. Enhancing night vision further, this deters unwelcome visitors by casting a bright light when movement is detected. Advanced features include an infrared LED with infrared cut filter for true representation of daytime colour, Full HD picture quality and PentaZoom 2x digital zoom-in on live videos.

Remote access via an iOS/Android app means homeowners can logon from anywhere in the world to watch and record footage live as well as switch the optional spotlight on to deter intruders. The app also sends push notifications and email alerts whenever the system detects movement.

Secure, digital and interference-free transmission offers peace of mind while a two-way talk function offers interactive opportunities. The Guardian wireless surveillance series offers a plug-and-play set-up and can be ready to use within minutes.
